Nancy Braun of Showcase Realty is among first in US to certify in military housing education program

Nancy Braun, owner/broker of Showcase Realty, becomes one of the nation's first housing professionals to offer a new level of expert customer service to military men and women through her recent certification as a Military Housing Specialist by USA Cares.

"This program aims to put greater numbers of military families into affordable homes through knowledgeable professionals who understand the unique circumstances brought about by military service," Braun said. "Our further goal at Showcase is to support military buyers and their lenders as they work together to make affordable and sustainable housing decisions."

According to USA Cares, the certification program helps all housing professionals make sense of the military language, rank and pay system, what happens when a service member is injured and how his/her pay will continue during hospitalization and treatment. "Earning the Certificate of Completion for the CMHS Course indicates a significant knowledge base that active duty service members and veterans can rely on for prompt and accurate service of their housing needs," says USA Cares executive director Bill Nelson.

Certified Housing Professionals will adhere to specific Standards of Practice, representing a commitment to provide quality service to military borrowers.
